COURSE DESCRIPTION

The contemporary transformation of the city display a profound redrawing of the contours of public and private spaces. This produce a vigorous debate in architecture and urbanism on the transformation of public space: discourses that lamented "the end of public spaces", or other contrasting opinions that advocated new forms of public space for collective use, with processes and movements of occupation of squares and streets.

WHAT HAPPENS TO THE STREETS OF PRISHTINA? temporary architectures and elective community devices. The course will aim to investigate which spaces of Prishtina are now empty, abandoned or underutilized and which populations of Prishtina can reactivate the public space. Today which elective community can redefine a space as a public good? Students will experiment and realize some intervention devices like interviews with local stakeholders, achieve a coordinated signage and graphics, designing of temporary infrastructures and architectures that will enable groups of concerned citizens - the elective communities- to turn on a six-month program of activities and events related to art, sport, community gardening, music... A program that can accommodate even international events, that make tell also abroad "what happens to the streets of Prishtina?".
